Manoharan: The harvest is over; I am carrying it to my sister's house.

Clown: Carrying it on your head along this rough path...? What will you do if your head aches?

Manoharan: Look over there... can you see a sumaithangi? I will lower the sack myself, rest for a while, and then lift it back up again.

Clown: ...Oh great!

Manoharan: I will be walking through the cool forest breeze... singing happily along the way...

Clown: Oh my...! Singing a song in this burning heat?

Manoharan: Yes! the animals run away when they hear singing!

Clown: Oh, clever boy...! but walking such a long distance must make you thirsty.

Manoharan: The roadside trees give me shade from the sun. Look back... there is a thanneer panthal to drink water and stop feeling thirsty.

Inform children that ponds were called thanneer panthal in olden days.
